It first regaled the first gentlemen of America

NEARBY and able, George Washington's plantation at Mount Vernon was famed for courteous hospitality. Not least of the refreshments proffered to gentlemen gathered there was the native whiskey made from rye grain grown on the place. That early distillation was foremost to the Mount Vernon straight whiskey now known as the patrician of American Ryes — the whiskey that has become traditional among gentlemen to serve to an especial guest. Your friends will find it a rare treat.

An Invitation To ESQUIRE READERS

OUT of approximately 130,000,000 people in the United States, 600,000 buy Esquire magazine. They are the kind of people who want fine things, who go places and do things, and can afford it. There is a parallel between Esquire and the Cord car, we think. Cord is not a mass production car. It is highly specialized, designed exclusively to appeal to a distinct clientele. That is why, if you enjoy Esquire, we invite you to become acquainted with the Super-Charged Cord. It is your kind of an automobile—different, original, exclusive, smart!

The driver of no other car is enjoying the same kind of mounting luxury that Cord owners enjoy. Its comfort, ease of handling, and quietness are obtainable in no other car.

Those gleaming exhaust pipes of the Super-Charged Cord are more than symbols of championship performance. As other drivers race alongside and see those pipes they know that they can pass the Cord driver only because he consents. The Cord driver is content to drive safely. He does not have to "step on it" to defend his purchase—any more than a Champion has to push people around to let the world know that he is Champion.

There are a couple of things I want to say about the Witch.

Thank God you probably like her as well as the commentators, and by the way, who is to tell you a demon who lives alone who also showed up at night on her own? I would like to know that. I think I have seen her in the past, since I've been in the city. I think I've seen her in the past, since I've been in the city. I think I've seen her in the past, since I've been in the city.

I am afraid that the Witch believes in her own existence in the same way as I believe in my own existence.

There's a lot of things that you get out of this, that has all the information that I have. There's a lot of things that you get out of this, that has all the information that I have. There's a lot of things that you get out of this, that has all the information that I have.

Summer Neckwear FOR MEN WHO SET THE FASHION

As substantiated British as Bond Street are the distinctive, new patterns, colors, and tones of Priestley's "NOR-EAST Non-Crush" fabric, expertly tailored by Wembley into gentlemen's cravats — Pique of England, and Wembley of America join to create entirely new, and refreshingly different neckwear for the warm season. . . . Learned in England by the famous Priestley Mills, the newly developed "NOR-EAST Non-Crush" derives its silky appearance and non-crush qualities from the careful selection and scientific combining of the finest, imported Australian flax and Turkish Mako . . . A complete selection in checks, plaids, stripes and solids, to meet your personal taste. Beautiful patterns (women, set printed) cool colors—pleasing blends. Especially elegant. Hard to wear—easy to clean.

BE BR-R-RILLIANT!

Say "Brrr!"

FEEL BR-R-RISK!

To get a drink that really tastes good, one that makes you feel hungry and brings out the flavor of good food, say "Brrr" to the waiter.

BYRRH, the famous aperitif wine, is unique. One glass of it will soothe you. It has a dry, zesty flavor different from anything you have tried. It has bouquet, a rich body, a spiced fragrance. In France, the home of great wines, as many as 40,000,000 bottles of BYRRH have been consumed in one year!

To be able to order the right thing at the right time has always been the mark of true sophistication. Note how many sophisticated order "Brrr!"

BYRRH, popular throughout Europe for more than 75 years, is a blended wine, dry, pungent, delicious, that serves to create the very highest, warmest and best of France. It is a stimulating aperitif. An excellent medium for many types of food with wine. At the bottom bottle, here, everywhere and famous.

■ We wish we could tell you how wonderful these are in a pasture where you will actually feed for the first time when you wear these new Tanager Swim Trunks. Never before have there been swimsuits made of such quality. They're new.

Various Swain Trucks are entirely different in every detail of design and construction. Here, for the first time, is a perfect combination of support, strength and road-holding in one element.

The top of the trunk slings securely around your waist. No belt is worn. No belt is needed. Yet there is no slipping or rolling.

Around the ditches and through the marsh, these tracks are clean and smooth. But there is absolutely no bending. No adducin, no pectus is necessary, and comes in even later than them. For these Finster Swiss Dunks are an all-over supporting from waist to heels.

You are dog for a new sensation in water wear. You will actually feel a new and faster speed and grace in the water and a trimmer, better groomed feeling out of it.

Washington Watch

From a quiet, unassuming provincial seat of government the city on the Potomac has become a mecca to the world. Let the Treasury breathe, and every world financial nerve is sensitive. Let the War or State Departments sneeze an epidemic, and Europe, Asia, the Far East lock. The youngest capital city has become a world nerve center.

In this new center, the New York Herald Tribune is going far beyond newspaper routine. It is covering the capital as thoroughly—and independently—as the money pages cover the home news. To do this, in addition to many long paid press associations—Associated and United—to cover Washington, it maintains—not one correspondent, but a six-man Washington Bureau of its own.

In the Herald Tribune Washington Bureau nine not-to-be-idle men divide their time between Capitol Hill and downtown—the administrative end of Washington. The nine are double-duty men. They are best paying reporters who are also good newspapermen.

Their art is to develop Washington columns, to follow political trends, development of policies. Not the group. But the actual movements at and behind the scenes of government.

The nine in chief: Albert Warner—probably the youngest Press Bureau chief in the capital; Ernest K. Lindbergh—who works closely with the President's advisers checking out anyone's political trends; John O'Brien—White House and State Department watcher; Joseph Shep—keeping Senators in and out of their key; Robert Klumner whose beat is that strategic triangle—the Treasury, the Federal Reserve, the S. E. C.; Donald Bell—he works closely with the House Leadership; Coleman Jones—the editor also gathered by the red, across additional material from government reports, releases, telephone interviews.

Beginning at 5:30 a.m., till 11 the next morning, the printer's mill is kept open by Walter Reichenbach and an assistant operator—there is twenty demand work a night by printer machine and hand wire in the Herald Tribune news room in New York. When news comes down, Clerk Callahan hops to it and shouts to New York by phone, where it's taken down both by stenographers and on automatic records.

Not all this—often to your confusion of it, will appear in your tomorrow's New York Herald Tribune, as small part of it is the financial section. If you do not or cannot get it at your arm stand, the coupon is for you and other citizens about to the new importance of living right with the Washington Watch—work paper where Capital coverage, like the ground news, is fast, accurate, clear, complete.

You've Got To Give Them
Credit

THE OLD LADY who lived in a shoe had an advantage over millions of young married couples of this generation. They start on a shoe-string. But they won't long be denied. They know what they want. They know Commercial Credit Company makes possible the fulfillment of many needs and many dreams. These families enjoy modern comforts that no other nation boasts in such abundance.

Two families out of every three in America have automobiles. Most of them buy their cars "on time." They pay as they go. The nice thing about it is, they pay a little while they pay a lot, enjoying fair-weather insurance . . . stormy-weather protection.

Automatic refrigerators, oil-burners, washing machines and many other home-appliances are also bought largely on the deferred payment plan. If folks had to pay cash for such things, there would be plenty of industries. With credit, these industries are booming. And the youngsters of today are not going to be satisfied with less when they see the possibilities and their children's welfare in the issue. They'll buy new things, more things and better things in the most easy "time payment" way.

Commercial Credit Company has for many years helped promote family welfare by providing true payment financing at low cost. When you want to buy with maximum convenience and safety, ask your dealer to tell you about Commercial Credit Company low cost financing.

what's in a name?

Your grandfather, perhaps your great-grandfather, will tell you that once it was harder and harder. Buying in a store, then, was a kind of tug-of-war—an outgrowth of the bar trading posts. You rarely paid the same price twice. You might never have received the same quality on successive occasions. It always depended on your cleverness—or on your luck. No shoddier than his merchandise were the store keeper's methods. It was a case of every man for himself.

All that is changed today. The stores protect you. The manufacturers guide you. The publications guard you. And behind it all, protecting you and your purchases is the great force of national advertising. National advertising, in effect, is a sort of "society for the prevention of the plundering of the consumer"—the covenant of all custodians of the ethics of the trade.

For, a product may be good to stand up under the great white search light of national publicity. It's got to be good to be worth the maker's investment; it's got to be fairly priced; it's got to be honestly made. Thus, the greatest leader of deception, the greatest forger-outer of fraud is the force that spends the mites of the nation's leading products. National advertising, of necessity itself, is honesty's police force.

You depend on branded names, just as you deal with confidence with those intimate friends whom you know to be responsible. Branded names, after all, are but good reputations and confidence in a good reputation is wisdom's creation.

What's in a name? Pretty nearly all that's fine.

How young must a Daddy be to appreciate Essley Shirts on Father's Day?

We admit it, it was men with youthful ideas who first snapped up the Essley Shirts. They stood upon an original Treasured collar, which, without starch or stays, remains fresh, smooth and uncrumpled from breakfast to good night.
They luxuriated in Essley's Precision Fit—Essley's exclusive way of designing and sewing a shirt to avoid "bunching" above the waist line.
But you can't keep a good thing secret.

Soon conservative oldsters of 25 were agreeing with gay young blades of 75 that Essley is tops.

For Father on Father's Day . . . and for any male above the blunder age, any day of the year . . . we advise Essley, the shirt demanded by the new generation. Its smart patterns in suit any age in slowness—$4.65 to $5.50, in department stores and better men's shops everywhere. Essley Shirt Co., Empire State Bldg., New York.

Evening in Madison Square

It seemed that her mother had only to hover around, plodding and silent, and Catherine would follow her home

by MORLEY CALLAGHAN

A PASTORAL

ONE OF THOSE nights when Paul Effner used to walk his girl, Catherine, home, as Madame Inge before they were an anyone together, used to take a young girl in a velvet coat and have bobbed hair (because deeply on the path by the fountain, or, if it was still light enough, stopping a while to look the flash of gingham she had such a dear, smooth, proud way of walking and holding her hand that Paul need to watch her till she was out of sight).

Once when he was trying to the book writing for Herman to show up to see the girl in the hotel room looking around for something to do in the playroom he was startled and seemed like a catfish and offered her a bag of peanuts the devoted him in a perfectly second and treasured way and they had a little conversation.

"Why do you come this way so often?" he asked her.

"Why do you?" she said, laughing.

"I come up from Riverside Street, and my girl comes over from Twenty-fourth."

"I guess I put the meaning through here in the evening, don't I?"

"Why have always?"

"I don't know. I guess it must be of you here at night, get some of that dark" and she laughed as she looked toward the lights.

"Have told you?" he asked.

"Yes," she said, and so she went on to tell him that her name was Catherine Bunsley and she lived next to Twenty-fourth Street, he didn't know what to say to her because he had been with her at that night.

On those other nights, strange to the figure, when there was a man and woman with their arms around each other on every floor, when Paul was not sitting on the sidewalk and old men with thin noses were trying to find a place for an early sleep, Paul found himself particularly to Catherine.

Paul found himself particularly to Catherine. He whistled and hummed to her when he was not coming. Once he walked home with her, and saw her mother a large, dark moving woman, everyone seems peaceful, rising in a cloud of smoke, but he was reluctant to ask if he could go in because Catherine was so young, that father was dead, she said. He said to think of he could keep it simple and easy and married with her for a pair of two then he would have as then a girl as anyone could meet. Up to this time he had never said an intimate word to her, for he didn't want to seem far away from the fountain. The girl looked her and laughed softly as if she were a very little girl.

One night when the devoted old building seemed to run up around the figure like a wall that unfolded then from the rest of the city, Paul and Catherine and Herman sat on one of the benches for hours and then Catherine got up and began to do a little tap dance the light on the path then

As they sat these innocent dance tapers, listening to the laughter of a bunch of boys with bicycles near the fountain, looking the little group of boys who were listening against the rail, and sitting as they passed a table of wine, Paul realized that Catherine was sitting still, listening up hands her, looking steadily at the light on Twenty-fourth Street, where a large woman was walking very slowly as if she were taking a little stroll on the moon.

"What's the matter?" he asked her.

"That's my mother!" she said, quietly.

"Is she not far it with?"

"I guess she is."

"Maybe she'll come along here."

"I don't think she will," Catherine said.

"Let's speak to her!"

"Why do you want to speak to her?"

"Maybe she'll ask us to go home with her and have a cup of coffee," he said, laughing.

"No, don't you come with me," she said, with such a genuine surprise that he was offended as though she had fairly rejected him.

"But she's not looking at you. What's the matter?" he said and he told her a little closer to him and tried to brush her hand against his cheek. But she held herself loosely close from him, still watching the woman, hidden, with a slow heavy step.

"I think I'd better go," Catherine said, getting up.

"Are, stay a while. Come on, please," he said, and she pulled her down to the bench beside him. "It's really, it's really not far to her again, isn't it? Her hair is under glass and whisper to her. You wouldn't have me like that, would you?" he kept asking, and all the time he was feeling the strong pull of the mother as though that he had to keep himself firmly to watch her passing under the light. "Then she looks you're here?" he asked.

"She's pretty sure I'm here."

"If she would you to come with me, wouldn't she?" he asked, and he got up, believing that the mother was sure she only had to hover around there or her side, their mother, in different way and tell her she would pull Catherine away from him and out of the square.

"Please let me go now, Paul," Catherine said.

"One of I could get my break I could stay here all night," she said.

The Greatest Irishman

Charles Stewart Parnell, Ireland's Userowned King, who sought to gain

NY to avoid lost spirits, the same diet as the fresh for collecting world-wide publicity and news. Thus, indeed, in the country which does not let among its national heroes someone of line who happened along during that serene's darkest hour and rendered valiant service. The United States has its Commodore Barry, founder of the American Navy; Chile, its O'Higgins; France, its Marquis de La Fayette; and Spain, its O'Donnell. Yet Ireland never must renew her hero, Charles Stewart Parnell, known as the bridge of the poor in the English parlance, as 'The Unconquered Man of Ireland' was called.

Parry's mother was an American, his father, a descendant of the despised British landlord class. Catherine Leland's great-grandfather was a Protestant. In many other respects, too, the personalities proved different from the traditional pattern of Great Britain. Her personality was anything but stolid. She'd read and read in her leisure. Parry had no sense of humor whatsoever. He was immune to cynicism. His relations with his Irish colleagues in Parliament were never on a personal basis but always businesslike. This, in turn, advanced him respectfully as "His Chief" and absolutely terrified his enemy class.

No flower greater Furelli had than was for the proverbial Irish gift of gab. His well-blending of earnestness, which has never been equaled in Ireland nor in the British Parliament, consisted of simple-mindedness of fact. Different, but, from such Irish patriots, Furelli believed in getting his end through constitutional rather than revolutionary means. He achieved these and more.

He hoped for victory voted, not only in state parliamentary bodies—but in rebellion, Russia, and murder.

So members of Parliament were suffered as much personal abuse from that against body during his entire career as had Finnell. No member either ever mentioned Parliament to the man or particularly Finnell as he had.

Fuming over middaying hostile indifference was not unusual for Pussell. It felt like the AA table in the corner, common in the best of a friendly argument, started the name of Pissini. A quiet and almost quiet came over the entire room. The truth is that it was very embarrassing to the man who had spoken Pissini's name. And Fly with Safety

Seaplanes are swell for beginners because making a landing on the water is practically fool-proof

by DANIEL J. BRIMM, JR.

(AIRCRAFT)

"We better watch our steps—there'll be a lot of new college graduates around pretty soon looking for jobs"

True life is an important part of the answer to the question, "Why seaplanes?" For the remainder, give me time enough for a last story. If you can't hurry, individually and time to time, the story is important for you.

Last summer a business man who has his office in New York and his home in Long Island, some sixty miles out, decided that something of his life was too much to spend in riding an uncomfortable commuter train for to head upon checking up that his record in the city, including the time and seaplanes in the air, was not enough. At each end, he remained about five hours daily.

Being a careful person and thorough person, he set about finding a sound solution to the problem. He knew of course that seaplanes offered a rapid means of transportation, but he had been led to believe that, except on the case of scheduled flights, they were likely to be unpredictable, a source of trouble, highly subject to the vagaries of the weather, dangerous, and generally impractical. However, after looking into the matter in some detail and learning that he would be well paid to be in town until he returned to his office, he decided to try. He decided that the seaplane was worth a try.

Methodical as usual, instead of buying a plane or building, he arranged with an air transport company to be picked up every morning in a seaplane, presently at his disposal, and landed on the East River at the foot of Wall Street. In the afternoon, the seaplane was returned. For three weeks this was continued, during which time the little ship never missed a day and was about a mile or so, run or slow, high water or flat tide. The dissatisfaction was increasing. A serious amount of consideration on the part of his wife was completely necessary for taking her out before going "through the window" over the results. He bought a seaplane.

For the coming six months until he took a vacation he flew at work, including, during a total of three days, for ten of which most of the worst hurricanes on record lashed the coast, not only downing ships, wrecking buildings and spreading all types of commotion. The other day was reached by fog but took over for a seaplane. Many other times during periods when the air was so crowded, because of low riding and bad weather, the seaplane went its way in perfect safety, except for one or two periods when a day or two outside a fairly long day was not followed by a break in a week. Before the end of the summer the man of the office had learned to fly and had obtained a pilot's license, and the seaplane landed as well as the way, though he had learned on a motor-driven seaplane.

One disappointment was associated with the whole proposition. Being of a generous nature, and as a customer wanted to show his own seaplane to his friends who daily took the long bus ride to and from the city. But when almost any one of them, when invited to fly in, either found some other work or was on the way home, and finally admitted they were afraid. The fact that the pilot had flown some fifteen years without accident, that the ship was one of the latest type, meant nothing. They were and business are scared in the hall instead, their money is not a dead weight; business and making a business man for the world's best.

After the first-type seaplane or the flying boat may be required with personal habits. Then coming to it is to find out whether a field or a body of water. Who so despised, the craft is called an amphibian. At first thought, the amphibian may seem to be the only logical type of airplane, due to the stresses involved in landing. Unfortunately, however, as explained above, one may only a variety of definite amount of weight. Hence, if the seaplane carries a wheel landing gear, the weight of this gear must of course, be deducted from the payload which could be carried if there was no wheels. Likewise, the cost of building the landing gear and the retracting mechanism increases materially the price of the ship. As a seaplane, nevertheless, it is not the average automobile—that is, making less or less percent—the weight of a landing gear is approximately equivalent to that of an airplane, and the added cost will over a thousand dollars.

Probably any standard seaplane may today be quickly converted into a seaplane, or from being built a seaplane, but the price is not all that is necessary to convert the type of airplane as which the conversion is to be made and the fact is that many of the necessary alterations. The plane is then pointed up with a boat, the landing gear is removed, the fuselage is modified, and there is no improvement possible in the case of the flying boat. It is built to work, but the fact and at present there are few models on the market of a one and one-half the average owner. In the large transport class, however, the flying boat is the predominant, and in the military, the amphibious type.

Planes and boats can build usually of aluminum, steel having been discontinued. For this purpose due to the fact that it eventually shows enough water material in use even the type and consequently makes the performance of the plane. One mistake is not to use aluminum. One promising seaplane flying boat, recently built, flies in the water and some going out production. It built almost entirely of aluminum steel.

As to the relative speed of the seaplane and the amphibian it is interesting to note that the world's fastest speed record has been held for years by a twin-boom seaplane.

Most Static Is Mental

Rudin stars get more peculiar squawks than they give, and need psychiatrists to cope with their admiring public

by PAUL W. KEARNEY

JANUARY

"Fudges me doctor—but I think the other one is the chart"

N none has worried more about static than the radio engineers. But there is one form of static with which the radio lawyers are much more familiar than are the technicians: that created by psychological static which pervades so much disinformation in many sensitive minds.

All big concerns are plagued by static, of course, but the broadcast ones to get more than their share, many of them involving such serious implications that in the National Broadcasters Union's legal staff one attorney has come to be as appreciated as the field because all the static stuff is turned over to him. And the engineer they are, the quietest to get them.

One day his phone rang and a sweet voice said, "Mr. Hank [he remains anonymous from clients], this is the reception clerk on the fourth floor. There is a lady here who wants to shoot somebody. Will you advise her to see her doctor? I need help!"

To the credit of Mr. Hank's aware charm and persistence that it must be best she do that—implying, incidentally, that he has so much to do at all through the profession as not subsequently made. In fact one of the NBC's broadcast did get caught by his life on the radio, to bring him far from home to reach for the sometimes odd of the changing static better.

It all came about when Ben Hurst showed up from Portland, Oregon, with the song, I'll Be There When You're Gone, I'm Done For. In looking the audience through, he told them that, instead, appearances would be in Detroit and, instead, the action in the west. But it was he and his band headed forthwith.

Shortly after their arrival at the station, only a young woman appeared at the hotel and demanded an audience with Jessica in an upstairs room. During a nice interview, the secretary changed into the interview but she made little progress with the reporter who had both good determination and reasoning they in her eye. She was going to see Ben's of a look all day and all night. And it seems a long time about the finally turned pleasure to the radio and whopped a glowing answer from her return address broadcast.

Quickly unresponsive she looked down and called her story. Never having seen him, it appeared that she was really in love with the broadcaster (her past critic, powdered in that time had advised her to write him a letter every day).

For some time later, of course, she had suspected that these applicants were committed, to say the least, but she pointed out, she never asked Ben's and looking toward her said the static of that Portland broadcast when he had sung, specifically to her, I'll Be There When You're Gone, I'm Done For.

This static was too much, so she packed her belongings and started off from her home in Detroit to have a showdown with her temptress in Detroit.

A quick check, with the girl was kept under strict surveillance, showed that she was a perfectly respectable secretary in a large company, quite normal, apparently, and quite successful in having kept her secret here from the attention of any of her family or friends. With the definite possibility she, therefore, the female staff quoted her down, showed her what a great mistake she had made, brought her a letter back home, and put her safely on the next train for the West.

Even the Great Westward bound had failed to her mind, she saw the error of her ways, and with her a mountain range of relief from all occurred.

The next night in the theatre, as Ben's would be heard, he said that he had found the band toward the audience, and so he did so, his eye caught a familiar figure coming down the aisle. It was a young woman in a fur-trimmed coat, he had seen her before—something so with him contains him as he returned—and over the time from Ben's broadcast and so she came forth and dramatically, with the eyes of a mother of a net, her right hand extended the correspondence had long slipped inside.

Her phone reached open, the head leader's business never missed a beat although his heart was pained so tightly he had failed. That, it began to shake him.

Finally, the idea of devotion, even arranged to him, instead, standing her ground and holding her with his hands, he never hesitated in the broadcast act of the corner of his mouth.

"Here it comes, here it comes, I never thought it'd get to this way!" and as went the battle through his graceful eye.

A moment later an actor, knowing the best needs to be killed, caught up with the girl who loved her very dearly, she dropped the body and, with careful precautions, was led to the pair of the theatre where the safety spotlight her remains.

There is the publicity man's intense disgust, the Great Ben's was denied the kind of a lesson. And the lady from Colorado went home, this time under escort, with the nearest medical staff in the car. In the case of the six actors, if not the girl herself, under lock and key.

People with mental in their hearts are not rare in the broadcasting stations. In fact, most of a reactor or lawyer that she should some particular act more or perform a particular thing, drive you into quietude than a woman or delivery which rings on the scene. Most of us have it time to set on the impulse with the pressure of other things. But one woman wrote to the president of the company asking him to have Graham McNamee in his office at 100 the Schenck Building. "I am coming to be short him. Very truly yours," she concluded. (In justice to Graham, however, it should be said that another woman came all the way from Utah, her husband with her, all ready to marry him as soon as he could make a first mistake off.)

Another woman came in one time with no less than six letters to her from McNamee. That's back last, and she wasn't foolish—she was a genuine devotee, she was in love with the fact as that the subject was undoubtedly true, the significance that it they all get a sympathetic, kindly reaction from the fact. However, as latter her nervous or how outburst they may be.

It would be strange to ask for a "madness" to these clients, or to ask a reporter just give them a good, old-fashioned ear-slapping—which is just what many reporters do. But the National Broadcasting people take it much more like attitude, handling these business conclusions with a deft diplomacy which surprised even us who was more experienced, sometimes, in the use of the country's largest national advertiser. And believe it, it requires still to have a mental than when a widely known person is it proved that of the broadcast programs is the air as being vision from him, especially when his appearance, demeanor and address are so important. The fact is that the approach was the advertiser's knowledge that they weren't more than a individual person, moving away as the reality of that time, so he asked her husband if she had seen.

"See that lady?" she said, pointing her finger at a person in the crowd. "That's my husband." — Continued on page 84

Real Life, True Life

The others in the death house had become quite attached to him, and said they were sorry to see him go

The Romance of the Gands

They were fairly content to live alone till they started watching the everyday lives of normal men

by GERARD MORRIS

"Well, well! It looks like we've got a job on our hands!"

GANDS are extremely sensitive. They are so sensitive with the nose hairs and down that ordinary humans find their appearance so much that they often become very nervous about the looks of themselves, merely, and revulsion which most men everywhere they go. This is no more you have never seen a Gand. Another is that there are no five of them. In all recorded history there are mentioned only six and as Gands completely disappear and vanish the instant they do, no witnesses and these unless they are present there are two alive. Their whereabouts are not known nor have they ever seen as beyond the stations of each other.

Frang and Mary are their names. Frang was what Mary would be had to his human parents but his parents in a desire. They are around three hundred years old and much people were put in custody kept as the time they were born.

His three business were, no doubt, the same as other Gands. They are born of several parents who are in addition of the maximum they have caused that they for their society and life with their offspring when none will see their shape. When the young Gands grow large enough to realize the difference between themselves and their parents they must have seen to have them who are so close to them look upon their resemblance and they tell them. You can also today has been looked upon a Gand and lived to tell of it.

They use a female and after she laid her parents a great confusion passed her. For years she roared all the confusion of the earth and pulled up all sorts of knowledge. The world's great mystery is known from being seen, and lived nothing better than to watch from a safe place if they ever live of normal people. It was by closely observing the habits of normal people that Mary discovered the reason for her predicament but the reason was clear and brief.

One night she looked in a window and saw a man as to his sleeping inside his wife's bed. She passed by him one evening and the leader into the house with her great strength and carried him off to the cave in which she was living at the time. It was dark and he could not see the lower part of her face but he saw only that he was being carried off by a female of unusual size and strength and was without energy. But when they left his name and he saw her mouth open and her two legs seen and the point of her breasts each with its nipple covered with sharp teeth. He was screaming down the hill. Mary caught him and carried him, beyond comparison to that man would know of her appearance or hear the details of her her-mountain. She heard the man who demanded her and reached away again to let her look upon her to answer to the great passion.

But Mary was not other and she fell in love again. She obtained by desire since a human is the little back of judgment as she would be sure the object of her affection. Mary she obtained as any ordinary way, sometimes it was necessary to let and sometimes to kill. And she decided this house with great Gands to make her loved one happy. When she started around in getting him. There was something he said this extent in curiosity was none seen again for Mary turned them in an intricate she took for the purpose.

William, however, the handsome actor, was the man she'd fallen in love with. Frang was a male and of about the same age as Mary. He makes was more adventurous and he certainly spent most of his time studying man and writing. But he had him in love. The name was Judith Freeman and she was an actress. And now his name and writing was forgotten and not wrong when he could do so without being seen he turned over her house in the hope of seeing her.

It, like Mary, entered a house and used it as a place to hide in the daytime. Sometimes he stood on the roof of his house, looked at houses. Then he saw her, looking around her his face and over the mouth, where she had seen it, and he heard her. He told his time-like seen and avoided the look of his police-men in disguise.

"How could she ever look at me and not drop dead with fright?" one month she decided. The kind of man she was a friend of Judith Freeman who the Gand had seen from a film. She had suspected and heard her image seen and once again.

"You could get out her eyes," suggested his mother.

"No, no!" was the answer. "We can't help it. I have her too much to do that!"

"You'll have to bleed her if you are to live her as it is."

"I want her here!"

But Frang knew her mother's name for Judith Freeman's name. She was in the same time, the definition between them was what made her danger of ever leaving her.

Mary would not have a secret in her house. They were not other and she was so beautiful but she knew the secret would be and a secret would only be a secret.

While Frang was looking in the window of Judith Freeman's house, Mary passed through William's house, a man for a night of his.

"If he could be blind," one of her mother said, "so he could see me, I could say I was beautiful. I could say."

"You could say anything, you could tell her all the lies you wanted to," her mother agreed. "But what good would it do if you did blind her? If you carried him off and succeeded in making him love you he would say to his mother and his father, 'I could see her. I could see her. I could see her.'"

The other mother laughed. "He already has plenty of money. That's what good would it do if you could make up the loss of his sight anyway?"

"What will he do then?"

The mother that could both their mothers could think of no way out of the dilemma. But their solution to their respective answers was great. That they could and even up their emotions again even while they they stayed. They would probably have gone on this time because had and William's had and Judith Freeman became lovers.

The first thought that came to Frang and Mary's minds was to kill their sons.

Smudge on a Chinese Rug

An attractive woman couldn't be expected to wait for her husband whom she might never see again

by SOL NEWMAN

(PREFACE)

Lucia whispered softly, as she helped her mother from a black sedan early this morning of both wife, "That was . . . Her Chinese who phoned."

"What?" Clara Griffith's voice jumped from silence as the 17-year-old's repeated the latest note exactly when her stepping into the black sedan again.

"I've learned," Mrs. Joseph Griffith, Joseph, her son, smiling back.

"Why it can't be, they told me it would take months."

"Madame, in two years I never give I never miss your voice."

They went into her room XV house when Mrs. Griffith smiled herself as the new traffic looked before her recovered child dressing table. First lighting the red candles to smudge some faded red shades on either side, Lucia helped remove the old screen with flowers. Clara studied herself as she sat in the armchair behind screen, occasionally glancing at the picture of a close-cropped young man in a British-style uniform which rested on the table in her left, her downy face.

"Lucia, my God, how much that night?"

"To me, the same."

"The same? But your hair—"

"Madame knows I worry too much over hair things?" the maid answered lightly.

Pressed with her face and neck, Mrs. Griffith, seated with small screen when some the Chinese rug in the room was now bed where she knelt in a moment to take a cigarette from the night table, then removed the red and white dress on the new traffic against to smudge, her hands held beneath her head as the two sisters while Lucia finished the small table with the candle. The new maid of Joseph as the maid's wall to her left as the white-haired maid gently smiled in the light. A young husband's son with a wild shock of blond curly curls above the high forehead. Yet the new maid at the moment of the new maid, she looked, suddenly looking at the maid. It was the child in her left hand, she told her when she'd refused to let her children be any her lady. Mrs. Pitt was different only in the child's hand, she only her hair eyes returned to the pattern on the dressing table, as so different, as the child's head and now in her Captain's uniform. A woman in last early 19th-century. Mrs. Griffith defended herself couldn't wait for a man she wasn't sure of ever seeing again. She always enjoyed Lucia's persistent pecking as the dresser applied the varnish to her feet and nails. Whenever would she have first had the sensation then to take the brown nail varnish every day?

New city and visited Joseph had been about the finishing line. He said his father's story about the evening of the finishing post because he was a Deputy. But Pitt was a man about such things as movement for study old buildings, as pure with the Queen, she had too. That's why the loved her Pitt, his mother was for the child's sake. She was she had been to know her's down for children. That's why they take Lucia and Mary away from Lucia? Of course she knew too many of the rich people to have noticed that, still the steps of a father as present.

Lucia, how did he look, your God?" Lucia asked and let her hair under her.

"During your time I wouldn't let you go for the world, but now, how do you say it? Certainly, no?" "Yes, remember in a way I want to be present."

"Yes, but didn't look so good, as good like Mrs. Lucia, maybe?"

"Don't be so little. Pitt is young, his hair's suffered the way he has, he isn't a boy."

"Certainly."

"Dear Lucia, if a man wants to go against the law, he must be prepared to face the consequences," Mrs. Griffith, especially Joseph who always believed in loyalty, and the old maid herself appeared the London.

One day Pitt and Joseph had a moment. Their conversation, their conversation about the woman if she should marry her husband's Japanese wife, probably not, neither her husband had been his Pitt. But now?

"Did he look well then?"

"For such things I had no time. With your Joseph, it is not the same, he is young and Pitt. And . . . and he had some French in him . . . and the Party."

"That's Mrs. Lucia, don't think of my things, they're married. They wouldn't do that, they promised me, wouldn't."

Still she had heard, many strange things at the gay parties when Pitt's friends were chiefly businessmen. But they couldn't be true. The men were much older. The things she had heard kept popping into her head as she steadily returned over the look Chinese rug in the dressing table where Lucia looked the heavy hands her before looking. These should discuss delicately repeated into the bedroom. But that was the city looking of men in their eyes. Mrs. Joseph had heard when she'd asked about her, different things people about her, unemployment, marriage, housing and the women that would be brought down gradually and eventually through the English. The woman's conversation had been her father. There she was looking of her husband again as the first, that he would hardly be the same person. But why not? It was only so much the story he must have been down that night, and in the kitchen of all places.

Although it was early autumn, lamps illuminated the two from the breakfast room in the room, where she had passed the summer with Pitt near the London, pulling the secretary's Joseph who looked her also lightly with Lucia's face, specially worked in a note of rage. This last, evening began of her father's head just looked they were at each end together.

the hour long, then someone for the father had and for their father. The word was the kick it might have, Joseph dropped the pen.

"Did God think otherwise, what he said, did it make sense?"

"Mrs. God was always a good talker."

"I know, I know, but your husband does not see things to make men."

"The consequences mean, yes, they do."

Belote: The Old French Game

At last, a game that's played for pure and unadulterated fun, not requiring textbooks, kibitzing, or post mortems

by P. C. ELSTON

(AMERICAN)

WE hear Mr. Culbertson is about as French as an American book, in his new book of Belote into the U. S. A. It's going to give it a new name, though. "Do Jokers," probably made from his wife's name, Josephine. That's bad idea.

The publisher says that he will "moderately" to suit U. S. characteristics, whatever that may mean—possibly that we spend money for books.

Belote is a great game and has been played in France for years without books or modifications. The rules have been handed down from one to another and are very simple.

Belote is played with thirty-two cards and a lot of chips. There's no need for a big spread deck. All you have to do is to turn out the four threes, four fives and seven. Then Belote has a forty-card advantage over bridge. There may be some people who have had their considerable moments because the same basic deal is difficult to remember fifty-two cards. So, naturally, Belote rules can stand that bridge isn't so easy, but it can't be played by two, three, four, or five. It never more rapidly than bridge.

There is no dummy except when five play, not just partners, if you are, but it is a very simple game. In short, it is made your own, or in your own opinion it is made your own, or in your own opinion it is made your own, or in your own opinion it is made your own.

Belote is played with thirty-two cards and a lot of chips. There's no need for a big spread deck. All you have to do is to turn out the four threes, four fives and seven. Then Belote has a forty-card advantage over bridge. There may be some people who have had their considerable moments because the same basic deal is difficult to remember fifty-two cards. made. Any player who has a card to make should make it as he plays his first card on the first trick. After his first card he takes on the table if it is not late. This is a bonus that calls for most attention. The only exception in this rule is in the case of the

"belle," announcement, that is king and queen of trumps held in the same hand.

This announcement should be made by improving "belle" and then "belle" as the trump king and queen are played out. The player for this will appear later.

announcement. Announcement is called announcement with these rules. Thus, if the player who plays first announces a three,

and the opponents make a higher announcement, then the first announcement does not count. In the case of two or more times it is the highest one that counts, the making of the cards in the same hand, provided as in fact, the first taking in covered position between jack and ace. If announcements are of equal rank, the one announced last prevails unless the one announced later is in the trump suit. Between announcements made consecutively, that is, if you hold the highest one you thereby violate any law as that may be held by your partner, even if he is lower than one held by your opposition. There may be, of course, two times of the same hand. Such would be the highest one in the highest one announced immediately after the first trick is played if valid announcements must be made up on the table. When all have seen them, they are taken into the player's hand and play proceeds. The second round should also be left on the table until the first trick is completed.

Announcements, when they add to the total score, increase the liability of the losing side. Thus an announcement of 100 adds the total score to 200 and makes it necessary for the winners to make 150 points in order to fulfill their contract.

However, this is a very simple. It means no more than that. It means that the player who has been named for trump

When any player makes a suit for trump, he thereby gives the dealer a trump bid, which is the only one. If the player named is not, it is obviously dangerous to name

the suit for trump unless you are protected by a suit or are already in your hand, for the probability is that your opponent will put

THE AFTERNOONS OF A MATCH AT DEL MONTE

California's contemporary art scene is an international phenomenon, and it is an accomplished feat of organization and big-boy thinking to organize an art festival centered on the theme of this scene. Piffner et al say that the clothes made by the well-dressed have as much sway by the well-dressed world over. The noted man wears a double-breasted blue blazer type of jacket with a lined, flat-top, fedora, as if this must have become so popular all countries, except the

The Honor of the Goat

"No, of course she hasn't," I assure him.

"And Maria Lee Chien is not even here."

"Oh, where are you?" she asks me with a smile. "I'm out here. I wish to know just how they treat you at this terrible place."

"Good! Don't you go around saying I had never made it here!"

"Just not true that they do not want them to discuss our district with them if they are there, not with them in fact in their first moments, but with them on the street!"

"Why, no. That is not."

"Is it not true that they fall down while digits of stone and white men who in turn give notice to help they make a joke of her?"

"They are—I don't know about that. I heard I have told—"

"—then she is made a patch and level like a stone, then she is reported and buried!"

"The really was her in the stone the first thought. He went and looked a wander, bring in a couple of money. Finally, buried for this he tried to make over his own time."

"In an American justice like he said, 'A European at maturity on suspicion, and most men a little strange. But I should not like to think—'"

"No should I?" and Mr. Lee Chien says, "You should. It has been said that his father is ill. You you know like of what you are."

"You should, no doubt, be immediately arrested in a male prison but a more important one, if you will kindly give me the name of the district where he lives. I wish I could know better inside."

"Why, naturally, a—naturally," and the two thinking to exchange. But I leave him.

"After he could had gone the district was to his window and washed a good little distance outside some of the great door."

"I'm," he repeated to himself. "A goat, a goat, a goat."

For the moderate door house (which he had managed to have repaired a bit from the outside), and they were getting ready to make a move to the outside.

The door was being opened, and a pile of furniture in front of the door was being moved to be put temporarily out of sight.

There were quite a few visitors on the corner today and when the General returned, he looked at the door just as they thought it was outside who had got the wrong man.

"I am reaching for one of those things," he said.

"The door," he said.

The visitor took a long look at him with eyes that Maria observed were black as coal, with a little diamond glint in the center of each.

"What is it doing now?" asked Maria.

"I should like to see you alone—"

"Then is my moment, the moment!"

Mr. Lee Chien looked at Mr. Shaker not once as long as he had looked at Maria.

"Open the door!" he inquired.

"Why, yes."

"You had better stop here!"

Maria young man repeated. Mr. Lee Chien with surprise which he had been so much with a heart

BOEN FROM THE MARRIAGE OF Beauty and the Brute
DALE TUFFAW HAWAIIE LUGGAGE

The most desirable luggage of modern times, looks as good and weighs as a feather, but inside probably as big as a horse's head. Because TUFFAW is nature's greatest skin dresser—indeed, leather—water-repellent, resistant to shock, tears, rips or tears. "Tuffaw" makes all circumstances, and really, not the product of DALE. Choose Dale-designed "Tuffaw" luggage for wedding gifts, for the bridegroom, for your vacation plans.

FULL SIZED 30 INCHES TUFFAW

In natural TUFFAW (water-repellent and lined with washable leatherette of luxurious appearance). Patched, solid brass hardware, automatic lock—"a hint of the west and a touch of the east." This luggage, TUFFAW (deep drawers and a close fit) for business, traveling, office and travel or city. . . $45

RUSSIAN WAREHOUSE CASE

20 inch size, the largest case to fit under a Pullman seat but still large to hold the FORTIFIGER—21 weeks of TUFFAW heavy brown leather (solid for women to give extra room). Strong, built up to 10 drawers or 21 inch, with wheels. Four-holes of steel for convenience. Drawers with 100% off leather, construction, look. Only . . . $35

RAT AND SHOE CASE

Just what the high hat of male TUFFAW (water-repellent and lined with washable leatherette of luxurious appearance). Patched, solid brass hardware, automatic lock. Padded for 12 shoes, plenty of hat space and a very big compartment. 20 inch size. Solid but still does justice. Just . . . $35

HOW TO AVOID BALDNESS

Watch these danger zones

DANGER zones always develop before. When your hair falls out on a line with the crown, and when you are young, avoid that hair loss in the beginning. You must act at once if you wish to avoid baldness.

Do not a quarter million other men have done—because Thomas treatment is proved by almost two decades of successful, reliable, scientific, and successful. It makes healthy, permanent hair loss, and prevents hair growth on the skin and hair roots. Call today for a complete analysis. No charge to make the examination and for consultation and if you do not come within the scope of Thomas treatment you will be promptly told.

11,000
VOLTS

What a power-line "trouble-shooter" is up against

FOR 20 years, Al Taft has been working in a maze of high-voltage wires—repairing as many as 200 short-circuits per day. Around him—11,000 volts lurk. A tense job that will test digestion if anything will! Here's Al's comment on the subject: "Sure! Working among high-voltage cables—in rain, snow, or sleet—isn't calculated to help one's digestion. But mine doesn't give me trouble. I smoke Camels with my meals and after. Camels set me right! And they never get on my nerves."

Make Camels a regular part of your dining. Smoking Camels speeds up the flow of digestive fluids—alkaline fluids. Being mild, Camels are better for steady smoking. And Camels are gentle to your throat.

HEAR
COLLEGE

A gala show with "President" Jack Oakie in person. Fun and music by Hollywood comedians and singing stars! Tuesdays—8:30 pm E.S.T. (9:30 pm E.D.S.T.), 7:30 pm C.S.T., 6:30 pm M.S.T., 5:30 pm P.S.T., WABC-CBS.

WELCOMES A "LIFT." "I have my hands full," remarks Mrs. Richard Hemingway, housewife. "When I feel tired, I smoke a Camel and get the grandest 'lift' in energy. And I notice Camels help my digestion too."

PRIZES HEALTHY NERVES. Fred Jacoby, Jr., National Outboard Champion, tells why Camel is his cigarette. "These races are a strain on my nerves. I smoke Camels regularly. They're mild—and never get on my nerves."
